

80th FIP World Congress of Pharmacy and Pharmaceutical Sciences Seville, Spain 18-22 September 2022

Pharmacy united in the recovering of health care

At this critical time, when the challenges presented by the COVID-19 pandemic are still fresh in the minds of all healthcare professionals, we must create more comprehensive plans to better manage health crises that may appear on the horizon.

Several features of the pandemic serve as useful springboards to develop better plans for future emergencies and accelerate change in our healthcare systems. It is our responsibility to review our shared experiences and search for solutions to advance the well-being of global communities.

Come to the 2022 FIP congress in Seville, Spain, where pharmacy practitioners, pharmaceutical scientists and educators from around the world will discuss how pharmacy, united together in “the new normal”, can contribute to the recovery of our healthcare systems by building on the developments and innovations of the past two years.

❁ Three main subthemes ❁

Topic A

*Never waste a crisis —
Learnings for future preparedness*

Although the COVID-19 pandemic is still active, within this track we will discuss how to implement post-pandemic changes to healthcare delivery based on lessons learnt during the global emergency of the past two years.

Topic B

Science and evidence supporting the response to COVID-19

This track will focus on how scientific developments in responding to COVID-19 have been evolving in a parallel with the “infodemic” — intentional attempts to disseminate false information — and what should be done to prepare for the future.

Topic C

Dealing with new and extraordinary ethical challenges

COVID-19 has presented many ethical issues both in itself and in the methods used in its management. This track will look into ethical principles under which health care operates with regard to contextual, societal and cultural factors.

Find out more here:
<https://seville2022.fip.org>